THIS WEEKEND,
MIKE RICHARDS
IS BREAKING
OUT OF HIS PA ROUTINE.

D12.12:

AND BRANCHING OUT IN THE ARMY NATIONAL GUARD.

For most Physician Assistants, the routine of treating patients in hospitals and doctors' offices is important work. But they're looking for more. They want to grow, to test their skills in a totally different environment. On a regular basis.

That's why Mike Richards, and thousands of other Physician Assistants, are serving part-time in their hometown Army National Guard.

Two days a month and two weeks a year, they work with talented, dedicated professionals, exchanging ideas, solving problems and establishing lasting friendships in the process.

Join them. Polish your professional skills, and further your training with the Guard's educational programs.

You'll handle problems most Physician Assistants never get to see on the civilian side. And you'll be rewarded with a good salary and excellent benefits.

Defend your country, help your community, and enjoy a change of pace.

No matter how you look at it, the Guard offers rewards you just won't find anywhere else. To find out more, just send back the attached card.
